The African Orientation Council of the IIAS should kick start the re- Orientation of the African youth and populace through coaching, knowledge creation, mentorship and training of the younger generation. We can make a difference indeed with so little . We can help to change the negative narrative.

According to Dr. Ngozi Okechukwu, IIAS members could offer technical or partnership that so it can be included in the strategy, e.g programs may include training youths, women, etc. on security, entrepreneurship, ethical leadership, etc.

The AOC Coordinator revealed that a particular member has shown interest in security, risk management, communication, Homeland security, emergency management, collaborative intelligence, etc.

Dr. Ngozi Okechukwu wants the diasporan IIAS members to have a sense of value whenever they visit or return to their respective countries of origin to execute empowerment projects similar to the medical missions doctors and nurses implement.

IIAS Spirit

The Board of Trustees has declared March 2023 IIAS Spirit Month. In other words, this is a month in which IIAS individual members may use IIAS images to make all kinds of souvenir. T-Shirts, plaques, shirt labels, crests, etc. The souvenirs will be pushed across the entire Africa to carry the name of The Institute and that of its members. More and more members of IIAS are indicating an increased fervor towards IIAS having understood the position and role of IIAS in moving Africa forward.

...This is IIAS Spirit Month!

The April edition of the African Scholars Digest (ASD) is being planned to feature members who submit photos of their souvenirs and photos of themselves wearing IIAS badges, caps, T-Shirts, labels, etc. The Institute has maintained its focus on raising the profiles of its members and pushing their names across the continent of Africa. Therefore, it will not engage in making souvenirs and selling to members. Rather, members can make souvenirs in their geographic areas, sell them to promote IIAS, keep the proceeds and submit photos to be carried by the April edition of ASD.
