IIAS was established in June 2013 to serve doctoral and other social science researchers. Since then, it has helped several scholars across the globe. It collaborates with other entities such as the Journal of Functional Education, Global Peace Missions (NGO), Emmanuel University, and Center for Academic Research and Educational Sustainability among others. Through the instrumentality of these collaborating entities, Fellows of IIAS have found platforms to express their talents and global presence.

A Journey Through My Experiences By: Godswill Adekperечи

Hello there! My name is Godswill Chidera Adekperечи and I am excited to share a little about my life with you. I was born and raised in Abia State, Nigeria, and I take great pride in my Nigerian heritage. Growing up in Nigeria taught me the value of perseverance, mainly as I watched my mother work tirelessly day and night to provide for me and ensure that I attended school regularly. Despite the challenges we faced, I am grateful for the experiences and people who have helped shape me into the person I am today.

Now, I am a 16-year-old boy living in the United States, thanks to my mother's hard work and determination to give me a better education and a brighter future. Since coming to the U.S., I have been blessed with numerous opportunities to travel on exciting trips, such as Ngwa Convention trips with family, Church trips, and many more. One of the most memorable trips I went on was a class trip to Washington D.C. It was an incredible experience to see all the famous landmarks and hang out with my friends. We played various games and had a blast. However, there was a downside to this trip, and that was the fact that my mom wasn't there. You may be wondering why I was sad about that. Well, it was my first time traveling alone without parental supervision, only teachers. I was only 11 years old at the time, and I felt homesick. Even though I had my friends around, I was still sad because I was spending two days in a new place all by myself, and I was scared. Stepping onto the bus that morning, a mix of excitement and trepidation filled the air. It was my first time away from home without my parents, and a wave of responsibility came with that. From packing my belongings I quickly learned that independence was accompanied by accountability. The experience taught me essential life lessons about responsibility, freedom, and adaptability.

I enjoyed attending a convention organized by the Ngwa community in the United States. This event was a truly eye-opening experience for me, as it provided me with a unique opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of diverse cultures. I was fascinated to learn about the unique practices of the Ngwa people, which were passed down from generation to generation. What struck me the most was their strong sense of pride in every task they undertook, no matter how small or big. It was admirable to see how decisive they were, always taking calculated risks in pursuit of their goals. The convention reinforced the importance of embracing cultural heritage and celebrating personal accomplishments. I left the event feeling more enriched and grateful for my cultural background, and with a renewed sense of appreciation for the richness and diversity of cultures around the world.

As a teenager, I had the privilege of attending not one but two church teen conferences that have left an indelible mark on my life. The first conference, which took place in Louisville, Kentucky, was a transformative experience for me. Accompanied by my church youth group, I was exposed to a wealth of knowledge and guidance on the importance of building a strong moral foundation, nurturing my spirituality, and engaging in regular self-reflection, prayer, and contemplation of my beliefs. The conference was a rich and fulfilling experience that opened up my eyes to new perspectives and provided me with invaluable insights that have stayed with me to this day. I am forever grateful for the opportunity to have been a part of such a transformative experience.

African Child Prodigy (contd.)

Last summer, I had the privilege of attending my second youth/teen conference/camp in the lovely town of Pigeon Forge, Tennessee. The experience was nothing short of enjoyable and fulfilling as it allowed me to connect with God on a deeper level and spend quality time with my fellow teenagers in the group. Despite the fun, the sleeping area for the boys experienced a flood on the third night, which forced them to relocate to a higher level, resulting in a few days without showers. However, this experience was a significant turning point for me as it helped me strengthen my faith and deepen my spiritual connection.

During the conference, I had the opportunity to gain more knowledge about my faith, values, and personal growth. The insightful sessions, discussions, and activities helped me understand my beliefs better and how to apply them to my daily life. Besides, I met numerous like-minded individuals who shared similar values, beliefs, and aspirations. The camaraderie was remarkable, and it was heartwarming to see everyone supporting each other.

The most important lesson I learned from the conference was to cultivate a love for learning that goes beyond the conference. The event was only a small part of my spiritual journey, and I realized that there was so much more to learn about my faith. I made a personal commitment to continue seeking knowledge and understanding about my beliefs, and this has significantly impacted my spiritual growth.

Overall, the conference was a fantastic experience that I will cherish for a long time. It not only allowed me to connect with God and my fellow teenagers, but it also helped me grow spiritually and gain more knowledge about my faith and personal values. I hold the firm belief that venturing on a journey, whether it be for academic, professional, or spiritual reasons, can have a profound impact on an individual's life. It is imperative to fully immerse oneself in the experience and cherish every moment, as such an opportunity may not present itself again. NOTES:

The International Institute for African Scholars is made up of the cream of African brains. The caliber of people at The Institute is a clear indication that the continent of Africa has more than the world credits it with. If there are any deficiencies, IIAS can boldly say that such deficiencies are sponsored. Some can label this statement 'conspiracy theory', but we must all note that there is no smoke without a fire. The only way to know if a person can execute on a project is to give the person a responsibility. Africa has all it takes to solve its problems. Any dissenters should stand aside and watch Africans. There might be obstacles hindering the success of the continent, but a careful look at each obstacle shows that external factors are working against the success factors. IIAS is challenging any 'player' to watch Africa rather than interfere.
